Be it at an airport, because the plane is delayed or cancelled, the station because of a train strike or in a waiting room where old thumbed magazines extol the glories of some rising star or downfall of a politician, both long since dead, this collection is to help you pass the time in surroundings which are either unfamiliar to you or when curled up on the sofa at home on one of those rare occasions when you have time to kill. Biographie de l'auteur Suzy ANNETT-BROWN was born in 1947 and has been writing for many years.

She has written for numerous magazines and newspapers and, as the third ever professional coastal fisher woman in France at the time, has just published a fish cookbook entitled Fishing for Compliments which not only offers recipes for Mediterranean fish but recounts her many adventures over a span of 15 years at sea. She now lives with her second husband and two cats in the south of France where she continues to write and makes documentary films.
